Lieutenant Commander John A. Bartky

Our President—who personifies the dual purpose of the College in war-time: the training of teachers for the guidance of children in war and peace, and the training of men and women to fight this war and to win the peace.

Preface

This year has seen the College filling a two-fold purpose — that of educating students to teach the youth of tomorrow's peace, coupled with that of shaping the College and its curriculum toward the winning of today's war.

This book, then, is a picture of the College pursuing as ever the task of training teachers by providing a series of educative experiences in the classroom and on the campus. But it is a picture shadowed and visibly colored by a year of war effort on the part of students and faculty.

Class

IT all began in September, 1939. A group of eager freshmen entered Chicago Teachers College, and on the other side of the globe, treacherous armies were invading innocent countries.

Such was the beginning. The two have moved along together for four years — the process of educating for democracy in the classroom and the process of fighting for liberty on the battlefronts of the world. The culmination of one is at hand — the end of the struggle seems not yet in view.

At commencement exercises on June 22nd, Bachelor of Education degrees will be conferred on one hundred eighty-seven members of the class of June, 1943. Twelve of that number are men who have withdrawn from the College to enter the armed services of the country.

Although the times were tense, dunes trips, dances, parties, socials and many other events kept the class in constant movement from its beginning to the present time.

The class of June, 1943, is a class of leaders — leadership they acquired in teaching and in extra-curricular activities. This leadership will show itself on the fields of battle for some and in the fields of education for most. All will not be called into service or vital industry, for there is work to do in the classrooms. It will be through this leadership that the citizens of the future will keep the world from repeating the chaos in which it is now enveloped.

The class of June, 1943, has produced its share of outstanding students. Class officers, Bob Moore, John Harbaugh, Ann Ross, and Helen Higgins have done a fine job of guiding their class through a difficult year — a year which saw its ranks being constantly depleted by the departure of personnel for the armed forces, to follow soldier and sailor husbands, or to work in defense industry. The senior prom, traditional with CTC graduating classes, was cancelled due to the depletion of the male membership. This affair was replaced by a class dinner in June.

Prominent on Council and the War Board were seniors Jack Duggan, Student Council and War Board president, Irwin Suloway, and Peg Connelly. Suloway's work on the publications has further distinguished him and Peg Connelly's capture of many athletic honors has given the College renown in the field of women's athletics.

Bob Anderson and Walt Krolkowski have been leaders in the publications, Mary Caplis, in Fellowship, Pete Bruschi in athletics, and Marge Kirk in class activities. If the names of all who are leaders and who have played important roles in the life and activity of the class were mentioned, the list would be a statement of the complete class personnel.

Officers

IN February of 1940, fresh from the high schools, the Junior Colleges, the business world and other institutions of higher learning, one hundred and thirty-five individuals sat in the auditorium to hear an address of welcome by President John A. Bartky and officially become the class of February '44. The history of this class is the history of an America gone to war, for when the Bachelor of Education accolade is presented to its remaining members, fewer than seventy-five students will be there to receive their just earnings.

This class, which started so bravely, almost immediately felt the effects of world hypertension. The men of the class soon were leaving in an ever increasing stream, and the women of the class began dropping out to take war jobs and to follow soldier and sailor husbands. And so, the once hundred and thirty-five dwindle to less than seventy-five as the world goes to war.

But while they were here, the class was one of the most active on the campus. Not content to accept previously conditioned ideas of college life, the class decided that education should be mixed with a seasoning of social activity. To make this more than a mere freshman's dream, the class broke the social ice by traveling to the sand dunes. This highly successful venture was followed by the other classes in the school and the Student Council. This tradition has been religiously followed and the students with their favorite

"profs" have taken trips to Starved Rock and White Pines State Park as well as their initial adventure into the wilds of the dunes. Their dances, the "Freshman Fling", Sophomore Cotillion, and the "Windy Whirl" packed a spirit of dash and freshness not oft seen on campus circles.

Social life was not their major contribution to college life, for while only a small percentage of the entire college enrollment, names of their members could be found on the teams, the clubs, the governing bodies, and all the other extra-curricular functions of campus activities. High on the list of student leaders would come: John Philbin, whose outstanding job was co-chairmanship of the '43 Homecoming celebration, just previous to his departure for the armed services; Fran O'Brien and Sylvia Buttney, two young ladies whose activities are too many and too numerous to mention; Al Schwartz, Tempo, tennis, and class fame; Jack Dyckman, ace class writer and roving member of the literary endeavors of the College; Marge Paschke, senior class president; to the June '43 class they gave Tom Jenkins, a real school leader.

As they leave to enter the war weary world to play their part in building a new world, this, the last mid-year graduating class, led by Marge Paschke, its president, Al Schwartz, vice president, Alice McCabe, secretary and Marge McGarigle, treasurer, can look back on four trying but successful, happy years. Theirs was a class split by war's fires, but theirs is a spirit which hopes to kindle days of peace.

AS it must eventually to everyone at Chicago Teachers College, practice teaching came this semester to the class of June, 1944. Most members of the junior class were, therefore, conspicuously absent from the campus, taking their positions instead in the elementary classrooms of the city.

Practice, however, wasn't the only important thing that happened to the juniors. By ones and twos the boys, of which this class had a large number, left and are leaving for the armed services.

Although participation in school activities was limited due to these two factors of practice teaching and the withdrawal to service of many of the shining lights among the men of the class, it certainly was far from missing. Starting the year with class elections, the class swung into high gear under president Craig Wilson, vice president Jeanette Stenson, secretary Margy Beth Fairbairn, and treasurer Marge Dougherty. First activity of the year was a class meeting and social at which plans were made for a class dinner, which was subsequently held in November at the Englewood 'Y'. December saw the coming of the Green Lyres show, "Ladies from Hades", with juniors not only writing, directing and producing the opus, but also carrying off many of the choice character parts. The dispersal to practice in February meant the separation of the class, but a get-together this June will reunite them for the final lap toward their graduation in June of 1944.

LAST year's Emblem saw the freshmen enter the College in a war-tense world. This year they are sophomores in a world at war. Part of the "home fires burning" idea to keep things and people moving and normal, which is one of the schools biggest aims, were the class activities — social and academic.

One of the year's most successful dances was the sophomore Goblin Glide. Under class president Ed Sullivan, dance chairman Bob Crossen and his committee, it was held at the Hotel Shoreland in October.

In March vice president Laurette Dunne took over the class leadership as Ed Sullivan, together with so many men of his class, was called to active service with the army. Other officers carrying on were secretary Peggy Sullivan, treasurer Jack Anderson, and Student Council representatives Avonelle Birmingham, Tom Burke, and Jack Mahoney.

Wind up plans call for a June dunes trip. Summer looks like defense work, camp counseling and farm work, with pre-practice and practice teaching looming on the horizon for next year.

THE Class of '46 entered Chicago Teachers College as a green batch of freshmen, but after the various initiations and passing through that time called a "period of probation" in the Book of Announcements, they felt that they were truly a part of CTC. This assimilation into college life was more rapid perhaps than in past years because the shortage of manpower prompted the lifting of the ban on freshmen engaging in varsity sports. Throughout the season the varsity team was augmented by the presence of five freshmen athletes.

As it did with all other classes, the service called many of the original forty-five men of the class until now less than half of that number remains.

Traditional with the freshmen at the College, the annual dunes trip was the first social affair of their college life. This was followed by the Christmas party and in April by a class dinner at the Columbia Yacht Club.

The planning and management of these affairs was in the hands of the Freshmen Board, composed of Student Council representatives Mary Jane Carroll, James Liston, Harper Phübin, Charles Johnson, and Mary Malone, and of the representatives from the various blocks in the class: Alice Haggerty, Edward Bauer, Sol Wernick, Chester Mulka, Colette Brennan, Marvin Jaffe, Seaman Peltz, Jack Mulder, Richard Thompson, Mary Haggerty, and Virginia Kelly.

A Student Council committee, the War Board this year was the major student group on the campus, sponsoring the vast majority of the College's war activities. Led by Council officers Jack Duggan, Irwin Suloway, Sylvia Buttney, and Peg Connelly the board supervised the sale of war stamps. Under its auspices a service flag was purchased and its dedication was made in a pre-Armistice Day assembly when the total number of men in service was one hundred sixty — a figure which has now risen to three hundred and thirty six. January was the unveiling of the honor roll of CTC servicemen. Probably the greatest single contribution of CTC students to the war effort was their response as blood donors when, through the activity of the War Board's Blood Donor Committee, the Red Cross Mobile unit was brought to CTC for a four day stay from March 23rd to March 26th. Over six hundred pints of blood were accepted from student and Englewood community volunteers.

An impressive record of success in ninety-five per cent of its endeavors has made the Student Council War Board a duration institution at the College.

STARTING the season by introducing itself to the incoming freshman, W A A's first activity was a freshman party. At this time also two new activities were formally placed on the W A A roster, conditioning and swimming.

In December W A A sponsored a barn-dance in the coed lounge and the winter play day, held in the gym, which featured volleyball, badminton, and table tennis. A golf lecture-demonstration was the January feature, conducted by Mr. Thomas Walsh, professional at the Westgate Valley Country Club. The last and largest project of the semester was the W A A banquet held at the Piccadilly Tea Room. Over seventy-five members attended and were introduced to the new spring semester officers. After the banquet the girls watched the CTC Colonels defeat the Navy Pier basketball squad.

The spring semester's activities began with a badminton play day on March 5, at which there were forty-five participants. Then on March 9th the W A A swimming team defeated the Mundelein College team by a score of 45 to 38 in a thrill-packed meet.

Early in April the alumni and the students played a volleyball game which the alumni won by a score of 40 to 31. After the game the Outing Club had cars ready to carry players and spectators to Promontory Point in Jackson Park where they enjoyed an outdoor supper and a vigorous session of barn dancing.

The main feature of the W A A Play Day, April 16, was the interclass swim meet which concluded the "I Can Swim" week, and the splash party which followed. Other play day activities were badminton, volleyball, table tennis, and dancing.

The fourth annual golf playday was held at the Westgate Valley Country Club during the Spring vacation and was well attended in view of the transportation problem.

The W A A is composed of separate clubs which hold regular weekly meetings, each of which has a student manager and a faculty advisor who attend the board meetings where general W A A policies and school-wide activities are planned.

WORKING for the accomplishment of its threefold purpose — to provide financial help for the Children's Aid, to make student loans, and to assist in sending Tempo to the servicemen — Fellowship spent a profitable year.

Under the leadership of Sheila O'Kane, Fellowship sponsored a tea at the home of Edna Mary Griffin, a card party and style show at the Morrison Hotel, with Margaret Kirk as chairman, and finally a Buffet Supper at the Columbia Yacht Club for the Midshipmen of Abbott Hall. All of these activities were well-attended and successful.

The second semester activities opened with a tea at the home of Ann Ross. Both this tea and the earlier one at Edna Mary's attracted a large number and supplemented well the depleting treasury. The Annual Flower Sale was held March 30 and a twenty-five dollar profit was realized.

"The Passing Parade", a style show depicting fashions in music, dress, and dances since the founding of the college in 1869, was presented in April. A definite hit, credit for its success is due to the talented performers and to the production staff; Betty Jane Bridges, script writer; Marikaye Walsh, director; Mary Elynn Grosshans, musical director; Peg Kinsella, costume advisor; and Sylvia Buttney, narrator.

Officers of Fellowship for the past year were Sheila O'Kane, fall president; Mary Caplis, spring president; Mary Ellen Downs, secretary; and Rava Just, treasurer.

Green Lyres

Green Lyres Board

Earl Keate, Martin Ridge, Tom Strunck, Jack Iorio, Ralph Vesecky.

CELEBRATING its fifth year of existence, the Green Lyres, CTC all-male organization, once again triumphed with another unforgettable show and proved that it deserves the splendid popularity and student support it receives.

With a mixture of James Barrie and Groucho Marx, "the big three", Jack Iorio, Martin Ridge, and Ralph Vesecky, outdid themselves in presenting "Ladies from Hades". Running the gamut from Brooklyn to Hades and from pure farce to genuine artistry, "Ladies from Hades" enthralled its audience from opening until final curtain.

The snappy plot was enriched with the songs of Morris Guyenir and Berry Hayward, which were orchestrated by Charles Wolf and Bob Given. A pit orchestra, recruited from members of the College symphony orchestra and directed by Henry Sopkins, played the accompaniment.

Leading roles were played by Frank Knapp as Sultan Ben Ali, Bob Kelly as Dirty Neck Hogan, Tom Strunck as Queen Helluva, and Jack Anderson as Chamby. The chorus this year was the best in the history of Green Lyres shows — a tribute to their repeated rehearsals and to their dance director, Gertrude Byrnes, who designed and taught the dances.

Scenery was in the hands of Alonzo Chancellor. Martin Ridge supervised the veteran costume crew of Anne Chiapetti, Marge Sabbath, and Eleanor DePoy. Earl Keate acted as house manager and Sid Block as chorus manager.

Innovation of the Green Lyres this year was the "Leg-of-Lyres" contest, featuring male contestants. All CTC men were invited to enter this contest to find the most attractive male legs at the College. Winner was "Queen" Roy Bedell, resplendent in his purple stockings.

Written, directed and produced entirely by the Green Lyres, the shows are always more than justification of the Lyres existence. The spirit of democratic comradeship enjoyed by the Lyres in the production of their show and the artistic satisfaction of a successful accomplishment are the complete and only ends of the Green Lyres.

The inroads of war have struck the Green Lyres harder than most College organizations, but Green Lyres followers are assured that, if it is at all possible, their show will go on again next year.

College Theatre

Ladies in Retirement

DISTINCTIVE in that it is one of the few organizations composed of talent from both Chicago Teachers and Wilson Junior College, College Theater has further distinguished itself by its successful productions under the able direction of Professor Fred C. Blanchard, now a Lieutenant in the U. S. Navy.

"Tom Cobb", a gay nineties, vaudeville melodrama, set the pace for the 1942-43 stage bill and was followed in November by Noel Coward's sophisticated comedy, "Hayfever". Second semester saw the production of "Ladies in Retirement", a murder melodrama which proved to be the best of the plays, and the final play of the season, "June Mad", a gay, spontaneous, light comedy.

As were so many of our college organizations, College Theater was directly affected by the shortage of men. Female roles were far more numerous in the productions, and with the withdrawal to service of many of the property crew and the experienced scenery supervisor, John Green, Dr. Blanchard was forced to take over practically single-handed. Throughout, however, College Theater gave top-notch performances. The future of the theater next year is doubtful, but plans are tentatively being made for the continuance of this organization on a wartime basis.

Tempo

TEMPO, the College newspaper, completes this month a year that will go down as one of its most difficult since the reorganization of the College. It was a year which witnessed depletion of funds, staff writers, and news sources; it was a year which found Tempo publishing weekly and left it a bi-weekly.

In spite of the constant departure of men for the armed forces and women for defense jobs, and in spite of the continued lack of news due to a narrowing of the College's activity scope, the staff, headed by Bernard Kroeger and Irwin Suloway, in the fall and Suloway, Al Schwartz, and Jane Delson in the spring, managed to publish a paper which merited a first class honor rating from the Associated Collegiate Press.

As in the past two years, Tempo continued its custom of mailing copies of the paper to CTC servicemen throughout the world and publishing a column of mail received from them. This column, as well as Tempo's editorial coverage of the war, merited special commendation from the Associated Collegiate Press.

Fall highspots in the Tempo year were the College Press convention at the Knickerbocker Hotel where the College acted as co-host with Northwestern University and contributed largely to the success of the conclave; and the winter banquet at Le Petit Gourmet.

The end of the College year finds Tempo, faced with further slashes on all sides, reiterating its promise, come what may, to continue publication.

INSECURITY marked Emblem's beginning his year as the decreased enrollment, wartime shortages, and technical hardships made its publication one of the more doubtful events of the year. In spite of these discouraging factors, however, a "business as usual" policy was decided upon, and the editors and staff were chosen, plans being formulated in the hope that these difficulties would be overcome.

On President Bartky's suggestion subscriptions were opened in October. The wholehearted response of the sales force and student body, and the excellent cooperation of photographers and printers ironed out in great degree the retarding factors and publication of the 1943 Emblem was assured. An innovation in the subscription drive was the "Peep Show" in the main foyer where students could preview parts of the yearbook previous to publication.

Concentrated work on the actual production of the book was undertaken early in the fall semester and continued through April and the first part of May. Throughout the year a distinguishing feature was the Sunday and evening staff meetings held at the homes of the various staff members, since outside work, practice teaching, and irregular programs made work at school difficult. As with other College organizations, Emblem suffered severely with the loss of most of the male editors and staff members to service.

Revolutionary this year is the treatment of the faculty section where the faculty members are pictured informally, and the appearance of a silk screen drawing on the presentation page. Wartime has prompted the inclusion once again of a special service section wherein the wartime activities of the college are portrayed and tribute paid to the CTC men in service.

ENTERING its fifth year the college choir found its male sections so depleted that it was unable to carry on as a mixed choir. Proceeding on the idea that music strengthens morale, David Nyvall, director, and the women members converted the organization into a women's choir at the beginning of the second semester.

Before the conversion the choir made four appearances; for the convention of the Association of Women Deans, the assembly in honor of the departing Lieutenant Commander Bartky, the Carol Sing sponsored by the State Street Council, and the February commencement.

An outstanding event of this season was the performance of Maurice Cooper as guest soloist at the Annual Pre-Tour Concert on April 16th. Mr. Cooper has had leading roles in such productions as the "Hot Mikado" and the all-colored production of "Aida".

Upholding the tradition of the choir the women made the fourth annual choir tour during spring vacation. The performances were confined to appearances at Chanute Field, Scott Field, Savannah Ordnance Depot and Camp Grant. To compensate for the lack of men in the choir, arrangements were made to have a group of ten soldiers at each camp sing several mixed numbers with the women.

STARTING activities early in the fall with a style show forecasting the year's fashions, the Home Economics club continued their traditionally fine organization. Under the sponsorship of Teresa O'Sullivan a series of varied programs was presented. The girls heard of textile testing techniques, visited Chinatown, and gave farewell teas for the February and June graduating members. At the final meeting, Frances Swain, Director of Home Economics in Chicago schools spoke.

Largely responsible for the group's enterprising year were the officers of this all-women organization, Charlotte Toomey, president; Rita Powell, vice president, Jane Delson, secretary; and Kathryn Lee, treasurer; who worked together with the chairmen of the various events.

SPRING of 1942 saw the honorary mathematics fraternity, Kappa Mu Epsilon, welcome Illinois Gamma of Chicago Teachers College as its 31st chapter into its national organization. The newly-inducted chapter lost no time in integration and consolidation by arranging an imposing fall program of lectures, movies and business meetings, culminated by the first official initiation of new members.

Officers for the fall term were given the famous scientific names which are bestowed upon the various offices forever as provided for in the national constitution. President Archimedes Robert Healy chairmanned the Illinois Gamma meetings, while vice-president Euler John Weigand, secretary Galileo Arletta Loomis, treasurer Kepler Rita Cooney, and corresponding secretary DeCartes Joseph J.

Urbancek held the other posts in the College chapter.

In addition to sound movies on the use of verniers and calipers and the history of numbers, perhaps the outstanding contributions to KME's ken were the talks delivered by Dr. Ralph Mansfield, Lt. F. C. Chunn, U. S. N., Dr. Lester R. Ford and Dr. William C. Krathwohl.

Twenty-nine new Illinois Gammas were inducted at the close of the term, replete with engraved invitations, solemn ceremony, and official sanction, bringing KME rolls to a total of seventy-one. The Pentagon, Kappa Mu Epsilon's official organ has featured local chapter news in its fall issue and promises to publish late developments in its forthcoming spring publication.

THE Chicago Teachers College student branch of the Association for Childhood Education is a local branch of the international organization bearing the same title. Its purpose is to provide an opportunity to broaden professional experience. During the year meetings were held once a month with outstanding leaders in the field as guest lecturers. Among these were Hilda Beals of England, Clara Lyden of Francis Parker School, Henry Geilen of CTC, and Clarabelle Baker of National College of Education.

Social activities of the year were the traditional Christmas festival and the semi-annual Silver Teas given for the benefit of the convention fund. Delegates this year attended the State Convention of the Association at Springfield, Illinois.

Officers for the past year were: Lorraine Serp, president; Betty Hannah, vice president; Grace Loescher, secretary; and Shirley Stack, treasurer. Faculty sponsors for the group were Miss Ellen M. Olson, and Miss Dorothy E. Willy.

Row 1: Ramona Holcombe, Mary Pat Ward, Pauline Trautwein, June Engstrom, Jean Taub, Rhoda Diamond, Marquette Schmitzer, Sylvia Spallina, Gerdie Brehne, Shirley Stack, Mrs. Malone, Anna Marie Porter. Row 2: Laurie Sweeney, Vivian Fried, Doris Smith, Rosemary Ward, Dove Kesselman, Elaine Kietzer, Lorraine Serp, Ann Ehaltwalthe, Connie Walsh, Ann Joyce, Grace Loescher.

If the demand for Physical Education teachers can be taken as a criterion, the role of the P E majors today assumes one of major proportions. It is significant to note that the freshman P E class is double the size of the upper classes, notwithstanding the present total of twelve males in the whole group.

Not only have the gymnasts provided the bulk of College athletic talent in intra-mural as well as varsity participation, but they have also contributed handsomely to the cultural activity program of the college. Class offices, student council, and most CTC organization groups, number P E majors high on their lists of active participants.

Chairman Joseph Kripner of the P E department inaugurated two years ago, an orientation program for freshmen to give them a basic background of physical education. Lectures by experts in the various fields of sport as well as a well-rounded activity program, have given the frosh a clearer picture of the importance of physical education, which has apparently provided the department with a greater influx of potential P E majors.

FOUNDED as a club for music majors, Phi Alpha has, however, during the last year, extended its membership to other music lovers also. Under the guidance of its officers and Frances Peickert, sponsor, the club has held several teas, climaxing the semester with the Phi Alpha dinner. During the last year the club has been an agency for Chicago Symphony Orchestra popular concert tickets and consequently has sponsored several concert parties.

Industrial Arts

SERVICE has keynoted the year in the industrial arts department. This service has made itself evident in activities benefiting the College itself, in the industrial training being afforded to boys and girls in the elementary and high schools of the city, and in its contributions to the defense industries of the city. The department has also supplied numerous instructors to the naval training school at Navy Pier and to training schools the country over.

In the fall a course in elementary aviation was introduced as part of the industrial arts curriculum. This course, which was enthusiastically received, is designed to prepare students for teaching aviation in the upper elementary grades.

The CTC honor roll of men in service was made by students in industrial arts and was designed by Mr. Coleman Hewitt of that department. Other evidences of the work of this department are displayed in the industrial arts showcase.

Standing: Tom Malone, Carl Schuessler, Warren Anderson, John Harbough, Chet Wierloch, Bernie Storck. Seated: Jack Duggan, Frank X. Henke, Ted Albinick, Roll Beulich, Hank Sansone, Me Levin, John Miller, Coleman Hewitt, Bill Moore.

Art Majors

JUST a year ago the art majors established the Art Guild, an organization which has as its twofold purpose the furnishing of extra-curricular art experiences and the furthering of the social activities within the art department. This year they have successfully accomplished these purposes.

Among their projects for this year was the holding of a spaghetti dinner with Arturo Fallico as the chef. The settings were artistically arranged in Latin-American motif, and the meeting was highlighted with an illustrated lecture by Miss Ruth Dyrud, describing her experiences on an eastern tour.

Homecoming also saw the Art Guild active.

This year it sponsored a display of the different types of art work being done in the department. Members of the art guild were responsible also for the lunchroom decorations at that time.

Under the guidance of Henry Geilen a group of twelve art majors made a set of murals for the Bureau of Volunteer Services of the Office of Civilian Defense. The first group tells of the development of liberty in America, from the settlers up to the present day. The second group describes the liberties present today.

Government of the Art Guild rests with the Guild council composed of two representatives from each class. It is this council which is largely responsible for the activities of the group.

GIVE A CHEER

Give a cheer, give a cheer for the boys who drink the beer in the cellars of Old C T C Give a shout, Give a shout for the man who has the gout it's the burser of old C T C Then it's guzzle, guzzle
 as it drizzles down your muzzle Fuzzle cheer There'll be a rippin' and a roarin' when the coppers break the door in in the cellars of old C T C ly in the cellars of old C T C yes Miss O'R eil-
